

Cumbria Constabulary has made some improvements to how it identifies, monitors and manages integrity issues

In 2011, the Home Secretary asked Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) to look at "instances of undue influence, inappropriate contractual arrangements and other abuses of power in police relationships with the media and other parties".

While the resulting report, Without Fear or Favour, found no evidence that corruption was endemic in police service relationships, it did not issue a clean bill of health. In particular, HMIC was concerned that few forces provided any policy or guidance in relation to social media, and what second jobs are suitable for officers and staff. The report made several recommendations to help the service address these issues.

In 2012 HMIC revisited all forces to track progress against these recommendations.

In Cumbria Constabulary, HMIC found:

- Since 2011 Cumbria Constabulary has conducted a force-wide integrity 'health check', using the Self-Assessment Checklist provided in HMIC's 2011 report, Without Fear or Favour.
- The constabulary has updated or is currently reviewing several of its policies, including those covering relationships with the media, acceptance of gifts and hospitality, social media use, and police officers having second jobs.
- Between September 2011 and May 2012, the constabulary investigated one instance of inappropriate disclosure to the media.
- The constabulary has produced a policy and provided guidance on how police officers and staff should behave on social networking sites (such as Twitter and Facebook).
- HMIC's independently commissioned research identified four cases of potentially inappropriate behaviour on Facebook or Twitter by members of staff at Cumbria Constabulary. These have been referred back to the constabulary.
- Since September 2011 there have been 18 applications for second jobs, all but one of which have been approved.
- Data provided by the constabulary to HMIC shows that there has been no change in the number of staff working in the anti-corruption unit since our 2011 inspection.

HMIC has monitored the progress of the widely reported investigations into the temporary chief constable – although because these started after May 2012 they are not included in the figures in this report.

HM Inspector of Constabulary for the Northern Region, Roger Baker QPM, said:

“Cumbria Constabulary has made some improvements to how it identifies, monitors and manages integrity issues since HMIC last reviewed this in 2011.

This reflects our findings across the whole of England and Wales, where we found that the police service is making progress in how it monitors and safeguards relationships with the media, contractors and others. However, we are concerned that changes have not been implemented at a quicker pace. HMIC will therefore continue to monitor and inspect progress in order to provide the public with assurance that all forces are gripping these vital issues.”

2. In 2011, the Home Secretary asked Her Majesty’s Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) to look at “instances of undue influence, inappropriate contractual arrangements and other abuses of power in police relationships with the media and other parties”. The resulting report, Without Fear or Favour, was based on an inspection of all 43 forces in England and Wales, as well as the British Transport Police (BTP), the National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA) and, at its request, the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI). We also ran telephone surveys to find out if the public thought corruption was a problem for the Service, and looked at police use of social media. The 2011 report can be found on the HMIC website www.hmic.gov.uk
3. The revisit used the 2011 criteria and was based on self assessments by 44 forces (including the British Transport Police), supported by inspection work in July and August 2012. HMIC also repeated and extended the surveys of public opinion on the range and type of corruption issues in the police service, and of police use of social media.
4. Her Majesty’s Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) is an independent inspectorate, inspecting policing in the public interest, and rigorously examines the efficiency and effectiveness of police forces and authorities to tackle crime and terrorism, improve criminal justice and raise confidence. HMIC inspects and regulates all 43 police forces in England and Wales together with other major policing bodies such as the Serious Organised Crime Agency, the Police Service of Northern Ireland and the British Transport Police.
